

Get the Right Light For That Glamor Pose

by Count Marco

In the proper light you can add years or take them off with the flick of the wrist. This kind of age barrier should be able to add years of romance to your life, or improve your chances for finding some man without having to stick strictly to dark corners.

American lighting engineers have come up with household controls that can make your home bright as day, or you can turn the power down until your rooms have the romantic glow of moonlit lagoons.

How lucky you are to be able to have these accommodations. But you have to know how to use them. Just having them for entertaining at cocktail parties is not making the best use of them, for even with the light low, American women, who drink far too much, still look as baggy behind an overloaded martini glass as under a bright overhead bulb.

As the years pass by you rapidly, and the creams and cosmetics seem to pack the crevices instead of smoothing them, go for the soft lights. Have them installed in your home.

Your man comes home after an eight-hour bout with women all day long—most of them years younger than you, and all promising him a last thrilling fling before romance slams its door on him. You have to have added ammunition to fight his portal-to-you depression.

Let there be light, but in moderation. You control the whole thing. As he walks in the door your hand moves the indicator ever so slightly, so the proper spot picks you up with just the perfect amount of wattage to make you look like Marlene Dietrich.

Another spot, as you hand him the first martini of the evening, has been controlled so it picks up only the high lights of your hair and the glint of your at-home costume.

With his second martini, the lights have been dimmed properly, the music is subdued, and candles flicker and dance. The pale, flattering lights are playing Cupid from the hidden recesses of the room.

If he looks at anyone else with this kind of equipment around your home, better do something about your own equipment and forget all about the lighting for now. It's not soft lights you need, just some recharging.

County Counsel Ready To Defend Flag Pledge

County Counsel Harold Kennedy reported this week his office is ready to "vigorously defend" the phrase "Under God" in the Pledge of Allegiance. Kennedy is preparing an Amicus curiae case for the court.

The "friend of the court" is being prepared at the direction of the Board of Supervisors. The supervisors acted when a Washington High School teacher brought a suit to remove the phrase "Under God" from the Pledge of Allegiance.

"During my 19 years as County Counsel, there has not been a directive from the Board of Supervisors that I have been more personally interested in than this one," said Kennedy.

The Amicus curiae brief is often prepared when important questions of basic law are involved. The current brief is being prepared by deputy counsel Ronald Schneider, who recently successfully defended the right of the Los Angeles Board of Education to prevent subversive organizations from using facilities of the public schools.
